HAPPY HOLLOW SCHOOL & PTO NEWSLETTER

~Maria Robinson

Happy New Year to you all!

Good stories live long and have a lasting impact. During our first week back, I walked into a really good story very unexpectedly. During my morning meetings with the grades, I had one group of dynamic fourth graders who were sharing their exciting upcoming service learning project. ~ It is exciting for many reasons. There are eight boys in their group and they worked as a team to research something about which they could feel passionate, created a PowerPoint presentation and a script that they shared at all the grade level meetings from Wednesday to Friday. ~ Although that alone is a great story and may develop into a bigger one, at the moment it is all part of the bigger story that I want to share.

I decided that after the fourth graders shared, I would begin a short talk on New Year’s resolutions. I showed a silly clip of children dressed as adults ~ portraying grown-ups sharing unrealistic resolutions. Then I followed it with a clip of young people who were communicating their resolutions from Children’s Hospital where they were infirmed or working as out-patients to overcome an illness or related situation. Their resolutions were clear, concise and realistic. ~ I believe each will be able to achieve his or her goal. Many of theirs were academic in nature ~ wanting to learn about building something, to read better ~ centered on self-improvement in the manner that one does after working around an illness or disability. I thought the children at Happy Hollow could model after them in some way.

Research tells us that real sustainable change often happens in small incremental steps. There is no big onset or finish and often it is work that goes on for years. This is where my story lay. I believe that there has been a significant growth in the way our students are responding to the affective aspects of their schooling. I don’t have scientific data to prove my point, just the knowledge that as we have increased awareness around anti-bullying, we are working on service learning projects as a whole school, adding responsive classroom to our Open Circle endeavors and earning gold stars for being kind and thoughtful class communities. While we will never create a perfect world ~ it is apparent in my story that students are thinking seriously about the kind of community they want to build in their work place ~ in their school.

When we finished watching the clips, I took ideas from students on the things that we could do that would be realistic ~ goals that would matter ~ ones we could bring to realization in some small way. I told them they could be things that would be ongoing. I did not give them a category about which to speak. In fact, I just said, “What are things we could do that would be realistic and help us to always be setting goals to be better?” From Wednesday morning to Friday morning, this is what your children said:

“We should work to be nice to each other.” ; “We should try to make new friends.” ; “We can do projects that help others.” ; “We can share things.” ; “We can try hard.” ; “We can try not to be mean.” ; “We can work at being fair in games at recess.” ; “We can be happy and laugh.” ; “We can listen better.” ; “We can stop making fun of people and tell others to do that too.” , etc.

At first, I thought the responses were nice and I was pleased, but didn’t think about them beyond the moment. I reinforced them with verbal praise and we all moved on with our days. ~ However, as the week progressed, I quickly came to realize that it was a pattern across our school. ~ Each morning, students said almost the exact same things. Their ideas were steeped in the principles that collectively bring about change. Their first thoughts were focused, concise and reasonable for goals they could work to bring to fruition. ~ I’ve been thinking about their responses all weekend. In fact, on Saturday evening, I attended the concert dedicated to the remnants of the Holiday Season. It was reflective in nature and its format was the adult version of what the children had been saying all week. I couldn’t stop thinking about what the children had to say and how powerful their messages really were. The beautiful goals and ideas from the students ~ across the grades ~ were all aimed at continuing to bring about a school culture that cares for one another. Not a perfect world where the wishes implied we would do it all at once; rather a one that would come about with practice and work in a specific direction ~ words including “try, work to, can do” and the like.

Every intention implied that our students were saying that it was of the utmost importance to them to be in a process of trying to be kinder, trying to be helpful, trying to be productive and trying to put forth effective effort ~ It all mattered to them. I believe that the story I found in the early days of 2012 was one of a hopeful future. Out of the mouths of our grade school students came the ideas that, if fostered over time, will ensure the kind of future that makes the world a better place.

They translate to ethical reasoning and true leadership. We are so fortunate in Wayland because we have many students with excellent leadership potential. ~ They are participating in a first-rate educational program and most often come from homes that support academic challenge and dreams of highly successful adult achievement. Isn’t it a comfort to know that our future leaders are also thinking about ways to bring alive the principles of the famous benevolent people of our time? It is the month of Martin Luther King Day ~ We honor his memory as one of the most famous benevolent activists when our young speak out for what is right, just and for what brings about peace between people. Our students at Happy Hollow clearly demonstrated that they were decisively in that mindset as they thought about the upcoming new year.

As always, it is the partnership between home and school that creates the most powerful learning. Together, we must be on the right track. My story is perhaps what I hope to be the first of many that evidence that as truth. May the New Year bring you all ~ all of life’s best, always!

Most sincerely,
Jim Lee

On the Bus: Please remind your child to sit in the proper grade level section ~ even if the bus driver does not have time to remind him/her. Also, remind them to have polite and cooperative behavior ~ fun conversations that don't begin or end a day in conflict.

Dress for the Weather: We go outside on most days ~ unless it is too rainy, too snowy or too cold (wind chill and/or temperature moves to unsafe levels). Because of this, we ask that you send your child to school with proper cold weather attire. Coats, hats or hoods, gloves or mittens, snowpants and boots are all necessary. We cannot let students who do not wear snowpants and boots play in the snow. In these cases, students have to play in restricted areas that are cleared of any snow and their freedom to play is limited.

Remember to check the lost and found: We still have many items in our lost pile. We hope many will be found. Please take a moment to check the bins and claim your lost items. To get to our lost and found area, go down the main hallway and take your first left toward the exit ramp. You'll see the bins and hangers there. Thanks.

Green Team Tips and Announcement

*****

ANNOUNCEMENTS:

We continue supporting the recycling efforts at Loker, Happy Hollow, Claypit and MS, and are looking forward to getting the new HS on track.

The Green Team's next monthly meeting is Monday January 9th from 4:00-5:30 at Happy Hollow.

If you'd like to find out more, volunteer, or join the Green Team, check out our website and contact us at www.waylandgreenteam.org.

TIPS:

Additional ways to conserve energy this winter (first four tips appeared in last month's entry):

- 1- Take shorter showers, turn on the water only partway, and/or install water saving shower heads.
- 2- Hang your clothes on drying racks (dryers are among your most energy intensive appliances). Clothes dry quickly in winter and help humidify your indoor air.
- 3- Install programmable thermostats if you haven't already. Try setting them for 60 degrees at night and as needed by day.
- 4- Look for the Energy Star label when replacing home appliances.
- 5- Make sure you have at least 14 inches of insulation in your attic, the most important location for insulation. This is recommended to achieve a high R value of 49. You can add blown-in cellulose insulation (which fills nooks and crannies) on top of your existing insulation. This is relatively inexpensive.

Thank you. -Wayland Schools Green Team

CURRICULUM CORNER

Happy January!
From Mrs. Calkins

Grade 1

January's music classes will revolve around singing, both ensemble and solo, and rhythmic literacy. We will work on refining vocal intonation and projection as we practice a song about Martin Luther King. We will also practice reading rhythms. Some of the patterns we will learn to read as musical notation will then be transferred to body percussion and/or instruments through a variety of songs and performance activities.

Grade 2

January's second grade music classes will focus on vocal technique and rhythmic literacy. Students will have an opportunity to perform as soloists on "Sing About Martin," a favorite song about Martin Luther King. We'll be challenged by 'Rockin' Rhythm Raps' activities, designed to foster skills in rhythmic reading, and have fun building original rhythmic patterns and sequences with our classmates. Other activities will include percussion performance and movement.

MRS. BRYANT'S LIBRARY NEWS !!!!

A Visit From Author Brian Lies !

We are currently planning for a visit from author and illustrator Brian Lies on Monday, February 13, 2012. Brian Lies is an illustrator of over 25 books and an author and illustrator of five books including Hamlet and the Enormous Chinese Dragon Kite, and Hamlet and the Magnificent Sandcastle as well as his award-winning "bats series", Bats at the Ball game, Bats at the Beach and Bats at the Library.

Bats at the Library spent 12 weeks on the New York Times best seller list in 2008 and Publisher's Weekly had the following to say about Bats at the Ball game :

"Baseball stadiums have an innate magic, never more so than in the hands of Lies, whose latest has the winged creatures gathering for an epic game, complete with "beenuts and Cricket Jack," and an upside down audience. Smooth, unhurried rhymes illuminate a hidden world where bats, like humans, "feel a magic shift,/ and ride the currents of the game/ as time is set adrift." Each gleaming page is thick with detail, from the bats' first arrival ("We wing from dark to dazzling bright,/ startled by the stunning sight") to the final play. Fans of the other baseball bats will certainly enjoy these ones."

While at Happy Hollow School, Brian will share the writing and research process with the children. In his talks, Brian emphasizes the importance of details, word choice and revisions in creating a story while doing drawing demonstrations. As part of his visit to the school, Brian will autograph books for students who wish to bring them to school on that day. They are available through local bookstores or online.

Wayland High School's For The Children club is collecting goods for Birthday-In-A-Box, a program run by the Family-To-Family organization. From January 10th to January 27th there will be a collection box in the main lobby. Donations of boxed cake mixes, canned frosting, birthday decorations, birthday candles, birthday wrapping paper, and gently used books and $5- $10 presents for children ages 5-10 are greatly need. Thank you for your support! Please contact Caitlyn Pineault at cee.pineault@gmail.com with any questions

THE NEW CONCUSSION LAW: A PRESENTATION BY THE BRAIN INJURY ASSOCIATION Thursday, January 26, at 7 p.m. Loker School

The Claypit Hill and Happy Hollow/Loker PTOs invite you to a presentation by the Brain Injury Association of Massachusetts. Massachusetts recently passed a new concussion law. It pertains to middle and high-school activities, but younger children can sustain brain injuries as well. This presentation by the Brain Injury Association will cover the new concussion law, its implementation, the role of parents, coaches and teachers, and the effects of brain injuries on children. An expert will be available to answer questions.

We hope you will join us in gathering more information about this important topic. For more information or questions, contact Niki Duffy at president@claypithillpto.org.

PTO BOARD MEETING – All are welcome! Friday, February 3, at 9:15 am Loker Library

The Happy Hollow/Loker Board meets monthly. These meetings are open to the entire membership and everyone is encouraged to attend with any questions, ideas or suggestions. Little ones in tow are always welcome!

PTO News

THE BACKPACK AUCTION IS COMING SOON!

Keep an eye on your child's backpack the week of January 23 for your Gift Your Child Backpack Auction Booklet. The Backpack Auction is Part 2 of the PTO's annual fundraising campaign, Gift Your Child, and allows the community the opportunity to "gift our children" with their donations. Families have the opportunity to bid on perennial favorites such as summer camps, time with teachers, police/fire rides to school, etc. This is not an event or live auction. It is a silent-style auction and is an integral part of raising the funds we need to support our annual budget.

This year you'll see an expanded community section, including a birthday party for 8 on George's Island, an insider's peek at the new high school with Dr. Stein and Mr. Crozier, some fantastic opportunities for children to spend time with several Wayland High varsity sports teams, and much more. And it's that time of year when we all start looking ahead to summer plans for our kids – check out the Camps section of the Backpack Auction for inspiration, where we have many favorites returning, including the Cape Cod Sea Camps, Tenacre Day Camp, Champion Soccer, Wayland Park & Rec programs and Frozen Ropes.

When the backpack auction booklet comes home, please take a look and send your best bids in—you just might be a winner! If you have any questions, please contact Amy Simmons.

HELP YOUR CHILD STAY ACTIVE WITH THE FITNESS CHALLENGE

The Fitness Challenge is coming to Happy Hollow during the week of January 30. Students will be challenged to stay active--and track their activity--for a full week. Every student who returns their Fitness Challenge form will be eligible for great prizes, such as a family four-pack to the Spectacle Island 5K Road Race and Kids Fun Run, swimming lessons at the Wayland Community Pool, a gift certificate for a yoga session at Roots & Wings Yoga Studio, a day of canoeing or kayaking at Charles River Paddle, and more! Look for the Fitness Challenge form in your child's backpack during the week of January 23. Forms MUST BE returned to the office by February 7. If you want more information on the Fitness Challenge, or if you would like to donate a prize, please contact Jeanne Brown at jeanne\_brown@comcast.net.
